

Retired, male, married 58 years, two children, two grandchildren.

When the Dobbs draft opinion was leaked in May 2022, I thought it too important to not look into it. Initially, I simply wanted answers; I asked myself questions, sought the answers, and decided matters for myself. But because the pieces in the Dobbs puzzle fit together so well and because they point to something larger, I am sharing my research – after some considerable reorganization and editing.

Dobbs effects all women but without digging into the reasoning in Dobbs how can any of us be sure that what we feel is, for lack of a better word, right. This website hopes to help us understand Dobbs and why it should affect us even more than it does.

My feelings and opinions come out in places, but I trust you will decide matters for yourself based on the facts in the six papers that make up this site.

I am not on social media of any kind and search engine optimization is not where I choose to spend my remaining years. If you are comfortable sharing this website, please do so.

Paper #1, “Liberty Interest, Due Process Clause, Rehnquist”, starts out slowly to build credibility but stay with it, it gets better. You can, of course, start anywhere you like.

Thank you,

Roland Lavoie
